Decide to hire their own attorney

Innkeepers are ready to fight room tax increase

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CARMEL MOTEL owners intend to ask a private attorney to review the legality of the City Council vote that increased the municipal room tax.

Meeting in private Monday at La Playa Hotel, a group of 25 motel owners and their representatives agreed to seek the second legal opinion. It was not known which attorney they would retain.

Because the tax hike was an urgency ordinance, the group believes it must be passed on a 4-1 or 5-0 council vote. When the ordinance was approved last Thursday, the vote was 3-2. City Attorney George Brehmer said only three affirmative votes were needed because the measure dealt with "usual and current expenses" of the city.

The rate was increased from 6 to 8 per cent and took effect Saturday. It will net the city an additional $200,000 a year. The tax is applied on the cost of a room and visitors will pay an average of 60 cents more per night.

The Carmel Innkeepers' Association will meet before the week is out to decide whether it will pursue legal action, said Graeme MacKenzie, the association president. He provided the information about the private meeting Monday of motel operators.

COUNCILMEN gathered last Thursday to pass the tax increase before the Jarvis-Gann property tax amendment took effect. Under terms of the amendment, now state law, no tax increases can be made without consent of two-thirds of the voters.

Although presented as an urgency ordinance, requiring four votes for approval, the room tax was a tax measure that related to "the usual and current expenses of the city," Brehmer said. Therefore, it required only majority approval, he said.

Councilman David Hughes hounded Brehmer about the opinion. "Can an ordinance be passed in one meeting?" he asked.

In this case, it could, Brehmer replied. "But can the City Code be revised in one meeting?" Hughes asked.

"Yes," Brehmer replied. "Simply because it is a change in the code, it does not require a two-meeting situation. The issue is, what is the substance of the ordinance?" he replied.

Hughes and Councilman Howard Brunn, who also opposed the tax increase, both insisted it was contrary to the intent of Proposition 13, the Jarvis-Gann amendment. The increase was a "great, green, greedy governmental gouge," Hughes charged.

Carmel has $1.3 million "sitting in the bank" in reserves, Hughes said. The city could use those funds or cut from its budget, he suggested. The reserve funds are immediately available "and can be spent in any way the council determines," said City Administrator Jack Collins.

A large reserve is needed because City Hall relies heavily on sales and hostelry taxes and both incomes "can change very rapidly," Mayor Gunnar Norberg said.

"Carmel is almost a recession-proof town. I don't see the validity of a large reserve against the possibility of a large depression in this area," countered Brunn.

"THESE SILLY little increases in taxes," as one motel owner put it, irritate tourists. At one of the most famous hotels in Carmel, the Pine Inn, reservations manager Lucille D. Snyder registers a guest and adds the 8 per cent city tax to her bill.

Norberg called the tax increase a "minimum precaution." A deep cut in property tax revenues, from last year's $350,000, to an anticipated $136,000 this year, coupled with possible new methods of state sales tax distribution, mandate the room tax increase, he said.

STATE SALES tax revenues soon could be pro-rated on a population basis, Norberg said. The effect on Carmel would be devastating, he said. Councilman Mike Brown, who later moved for adoption of the ordinance, said the money should be directed to Harrison Memorial Library.

The city received some $600,000 in hostelry taxes last year. Without the tax increase, city officials still predicted a $90,000 increase in room tax revenues for

NOT EXTREMELY attractive as it is now, this back lot behind Charlie O's restaurant was to be the site of an exclusive outdoor dining patio. Charles Ober, who conceived

Restaurateur's 'key club' dining scheme ends abruptly

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CHARLES OBER, the flamboyant Carmel restaurateur, has been denied permission to open an exclusive "key club" dining area behind his restaurant on Dolores near Ocean.

That unanimous ruling was made by the Carmel Planning Commission on Wednesday of last week. As a result, the owner of the popular 60-seat restaurant Charlie O and Co. will have to scrap plans to add a 30-seat outdoor dining area in a section now used to dump garbage.

The commission, acting as the board of adjustments, denied the request because of potential conflicts with city fire codes, insufficient access and a neighbor's complaint that it would bring noise and congestion.

Ober, who has operated the restaurant for two years, stated after the meeting that he is uncertain if he will appeal the decision to the Carmel City Council.

"I'm just trying to do something nice here. If it sits too hard, then the heck with it," he said.

The commission approved the land use subcommittee report that recommended denial of the application. The report noted that patrons would have to pass through the kitchen to reach the proposed dining area. That is illegal, according to Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham.

THE PROPOSAL was unique for Carmel. There are no private dining clubs in the city.

The club would have exclusively served locals, Ober stated, although he admitted after the meeting, "if the mayor of Monterey wanted a key, I would probably have to give him one."

Ober said he would have kept a lid on the membership by issuing only 50 "master keys" that could not be duplicated. He said he had considered charging $100 per key. Each key would have been made of silver and 10 karat gold and inscribed with the owner's name. He said he already had offers of up to $400 for keys.

"There are lots of city officials who were counting on these keys," Ober stated later, although he did not name them for the record.

The club would have had a different menu and lower prices than the main dining area, he said. It would have operated only four hours a day, Ober noted.

"It is not an extension of the restaurant, but an outdoor eating area only for the citizens of Carmel," he explained to the commission.

IF IT IS A private key club, how can we keep the people out after hours?" asked Commissioner Leslie Gross. Ober replied a double lock inside the restaurant would be bolted when the club is closed.

"Would the fire department have a key?" Gross inquired.

"They would use a real master key in the event of a fire—a six-foot crow bar or an ax," remarked Cunningham.

"How would you decide who gets the keys?" pressed Eileen Thompson.

"I know the locals. Our business is 87 per cent local. It will probably become like Russian roulette deciding who gets the keys. But there are lots of people who eat at my restaurant all the time and I'll have to swing their way," Ober replied.

Ober's father-in-law, Bob Smith, praised the project as an "artistic delight." It would add fountains, landscaping and Spanish decor to an area which now "just sits there in the sun," Smith said.

Opposition to the proposal was voiced by Jean Ewing, a resident who has lived in an apartment above the restaurant for one month.

"I'm the one who made the mistake of being naive enough to rent the apartment above Charlie O's," she said, introducing herself.

She said the noise level increases whenever Ober leaves the premises. "I could get along fine with Mr. Ober. It's his crew and management that are causing the noise problems," she said. The new dining area would add more noise, she said.

Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson moved for denial of the application. After the denial, Ober said, "It would have served locals and helped business, but I'll survive."

Motel owner finds himself back at square one

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CONSIDER THE PLIGHT of Tong Kim, 35, a South Korean immigrant who moved to this country five years ago. For four months, he has attempted to renovate the former Carmel Cottages, now called the Pine Tree Inn, on Carpenter and First.

The result has been four months of problems with the city. Here is an outline of them:

- The Carmel Planning Commission approved his plan to install a putting green at the motel on June 21, but last week the commission told him no one could play golf on it. That requires an additional use permit, the commissioners said.

- His hopes for installing a hot tub for guests were raised in June when the county health department decided to accept a fiber glass model after rejecting a redwood tub for health reasons. Then, the planning commission refused to allow either model.

- The commission permitted him to convert a structure into a small conference room on the grounds, but restricted its use in such a way that even Kim—the owner—could not use it.

- His business license application to the Business License Review Board was rejected in May because the fire chief said the motel's name could be confused with that of a newspaper. He originally called it the Carmel Pine Cone Inn.

The board recommended a new name for the motel—the Pine Tree Inn—which Kim promptly adopted. Since then, Kim and his attorney have been enmeshed in litigation with Max McKee, owner of the Pine Inn on Ocean Avenue. McKee claimed the name can be confused with the Pine Inn.

BESIDES THE PINE TREE Inn, which has 26 rooms, Kim also owns the 34-unit Ramona Inn in Monterey. He purchased that when he moved to the Peninsula a year ago. But it is his Carmel acquisition that is the problem.

Because it is situated in the residential district—not the commercial district—he faces much of the same restrictions as the houses that surround the motel.

City Attorney George Brehmer explained Kim's situation like this: "If you drive by his inn, you should expect the same noises you'd hear in any residential neighborhood."

The planning commission concluded, on a 6-1 vote, that adding a hot tub and putting green would increase the noise. Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson cast the dissenting vote. It also concluded that the additions would be expansions of commercial use.

Motel expansion is illegal in the residential district. It has been illegal since 1967, when the City Council passed an ordinance to allow existing motels in the residential district, but to outlaw any new ones and prohibit existing ones from expanding.

"You have to be very careful about expanding this use in a

Sewer fee

Water bills go up $3

HOUSEHOLD water bills went up $3 a month on Friday. Moving away from property tax levies, directors of the Carmel Sanitary District voted to double the $3 monthly user fee, boost the price for commercial service pay and pare eight cents from the 23-cent property tax rate.

The user charge increase was approved 4-0 on the last day of June—the final day when a rate increase could be assessed without an election, as specified in Proposition 13. Director Ted Weller was absent.

Commercial sewer rates also were hiked slightly. Users had paid half of the water bill, but now will pay the district 60 per cent of it. The increase will raise $250,000, according to district business manager Bud Bigelow. Property tax revenues will amount to only $179,000 of the $3.1 million district budget approved Friday.

The directors have been moving toward higher user charges for the past year. A federal mandate to sewer districts requires them to begin paying operating expenses from user fees rather than property taxes.

The board raised the monthly fee from $2 to $3 in July 1977. Directors Weller and Jim Pruitt asked the board earlier this year to rely on property taxes as long as possible because district residents are more familiar with the charge.

Pruitt again asked Friday that the board leave open the option to lower the user fee in exchange for a higher property tax once the murky tax picture clears up.

Bigelow said users will see the higher charges in October, when the California-American Water Co. mails out bills for the August-September billing period. Cal-Am

Con men cash in on currency, confusion

When is $20 not $20? When it's Canadian, of course.

And while a Canadian $20 bill is easy to tell from the greenback visage of Andrew Jackson, it is a little harder to tell apart the Canadian and American traveler's checks issued by American Express.

Unless store clerks are wary, Canadians or those who buy the Canadian checks and use them locally can get what amounts to a 10 per cent discount on all their purchases. The exchange rate floats from 85 to 90 cents Canadian per U.S. dollar.

Don Seydel of The Peppercorn in The Barnyard found out the hard way last week when a clerk accepted a $50 traveler's check and paid U.S. dollars when it was drawn in Canadian money.

LOOK AGAIN, because the traveler's check at the top is worth at least 10 cents less than the one at the bottom. Because the Canadian version looks akin to its Yankee counterpart, at least one salesclerk from Carmel has accepted it at full U.S. value. Actually, it is worth only 85 to 90 cents, depending on the current exchange rate.

"That's a new one on me," he said. "I've already told them to watch for checks drawn on Canadian banks."

Seydel said there is no question the users are trying to turn a profit on their checks.

"They've just bought a 10 per cent discount you can get by without paying for," he said.

Seydel said it costs him more than the 10 per cent difference between Canadian and U.S. dollars. Many banks assess a service charge of up to $1.50 for handling transactions in Canadian money.

The Canadian dollar traveler's checks are available in Carmel through Bob McGinnis Travel in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center.

But Suzanne Holm, a sales representative there, said it is really a matter of the clerks being alert more than a problem of confusion because of the appearance of the checks.

"A lot of merchants have people who are not as careful as they should be," she said. "The checks are clearly different."

Those in Canadian dollars state that twice on the face and again on the back.

Some of the confusion may stem from the fact that the design has only recently been changed by American Express. The new checks are more clearly marked as Canadian dollars than were their predecessors.

Seydel and Mrs. Holm stressed the importance of salesclerks knowing the difference between the two types of checks, particularly with the new clerks and increased volume of tourists during the summer.

Otherwise, every day can be a discount day.

Valley resort plan ruled 'inconsistent'

Marriott vows to appeal use permit refusal

THE RANCHO CANADA Marriott Lodge proposed for Carmel Valley has been declared inconsistent with area master plans and thus ineligible to apply for a use permit. The Monterey County Planning Commission made its decision on a swift and firm 6-0 vote on Wednesday of last week.

Attorney Gerald Dalton, representing the developer, Winthrop-Carmel, Inc., said he will appeal the decision to the board of supervisors.

Even if the appeal is successful, project backers would have to come back to the planning commission for a review of the technical feasibility of the 376-room resort hotel complex.

The commission heard a brief discussion on the technical aspects of the proposed on-site sewage treatment system for the hotel. But it quickly dropped consideration of the technical "hows" of the application and went straight to the issue of whether it should be built at all.

Commissioner William Peters cited sections of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, the 1976 Lower Carmel Valley amendment to the Valley master plan and the open space element of the county general plan to show that a resort hotel was never intended for the westerly 25 acres of the Rancho Canada Golf Course.

Peters said his reading of all three plans is that the area is intended for either greenbelt open space or, at maximum density, rural residential expansion.

THE PENINSULA AREA plan, he said, indicates the land as greenbelt, a buffer between the concentrated residential and commercial uses at the mouth of the Valley and the rural residential areas farther east.

The Valley master plan allows resort hotels on large parcels if they are not detrimental to the neighboring properties or the community in general, Peters said.

But past history has been that no resort hotels have been approved in the "G" zone—covering most Valley residential areas.

"My reading of the Carmel Valley Master Plan is this was intended to be rural residential expansion and not a resort," he said.

While the Lower Valley amendment to the master plan did not include residential areas—a point stressed by Dalton in his rebuttal to Peters's arguments—it defined the commercial area, according to the commissioner.

By excluding the Marriott property, he said, the intention was to keep the golf course land in open space or for residential use, not as a commercial operation.

Peters admitted that there is a "mish-mash of master plans" covering the area, but said there is one common thread: "Marriott is not in the urban development area."

"You mean it's acceptable under the zoning, but not under the plans?" asked Commissioner Joseph Sullivan.

"Yes," Peters replied. He added that when the Peninsula Area Plan was adopted in 1966, zoning did not have to be brought into compliance with the plan.

If that had been required, he said, "it would be unequivocal that it would be in 'O' zoning (open space) now."

DALTON CITED THE extension of development farther up the Valley—the Hacienda Carmel project and two condominium clusters adjacent to the golf course to the west—as evidence that growth in the Valley already is going on apace.

"The question of spreading urban sprawl ignores what is already there," he said.

Dalton objected to deciding the project's fate on the issue of consistency alone, saying the "development cannot fairly be considered unless all the elements in the use permit can be considered."

"If the project came before you with no environmental impact report and you were basing your conclusion on density, that would be different," he said. "In this instance, we have an entire EIR that took up to a year in the process with much public input."

"To make a decision on this issue on the bare statement of Dr. Peters would be inappropriate," Dalton declared.

"Mr. Dalton put it, in essence, because you let us do an EIR, in essence you say it is consistent," Peters responded. "I've been telling developers this is an invalid assumption."

COMMISSIONER PAUL PATCHICK said the commission should take into account local opposition to the proposal. He

Loud radios

Dear Editor:

Because progressive education failed to include good manners in its curriculum, it appears we now require an ordinance against the blare of automobile radios cruising the streets of Carmel.

The person behind the wheel is insisting that the public "look at me, I have a powerful car and a complete disregard for the sensibilities of others."

The noise is not in keeping with any element of Carmel, so the Village could agree to have these exhibitionists cited for disturbing the peace.

Bring it home

Dear Editor:

Seven hurrahs for seven Monterey planning commissioners. Marriott has been disapproved, seven zip, as being inconsistent with the area.

This decision will be appealed to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Let's have the next Marriott hearing at Sunset Center auditorium in Carmel. It seats over 700 people. I believe the people of Carmel Valley and the Carmel area will fill Sunset if the hearing is held on our own turf.

Thank you, Carmel Valley Property Owners' Association, Old Carmel, the Alliance, Carmel Area Coalition, Carmel Citizens Committee, Carmel City Council, League of Women Voters, Sierra Club, those that came to three meetings in Salinas and the over 2,000 folks that signed the petition in front of the Village Corner.

Bring the next hearing to the Carmel area (Sunset Center auditorium) and all those that find it a chore to drive to Salinas will be able to show up at Sunset.

Political game

Dear Editor:

Since the passage of Proposition 13, the only audible message from the taxpayers to the people living at Rippling River, a facility for the physically handicapped and the elderly, would appear to be "you're expendable." But, I happen to believe all taxpayers don't feel this way.

I can't help but wonder if it is fair to put all the blame on the passage of Prop. 13. As a result of its passage, nearly all activities have been taken away from here. It's hard to believe that some alternatives weren't waiting in the wings in case the Jarvis-Gann initiative was approved. Surely, something can and must be done. Is Prop. 13 really as destructive as we are being led to believe? Or are those being affected by Prop. 13 merely political pawns trapped in a quicksand of political games? I believe the chaos and panic to be deliberate weapons for them to say "look at all the disruption you voted for—it's your fault, not ours."

I'm fed up with being made a political pawn! If it's a game, it's a sick one!

Gilded gates?

Dear Editor:

When Carmel becomes a Heritage City, will we have gilded gates with trumpeters dressed in appropriate costumes (medieval, no doubt) to welcome our mayor and his court as they enter their dream world? A recent president of the United States had such a dream, but it turned out to be something of a nightmare. Are we dreaming? Can we be awakened before it is too late?

We in Carmel should try to realize that although this is indeed a special place to live, it really is not the Holy City. We should realize that in order to maintain our integrity as individuals and as a community, it is not necessary nor wise to cut ourselves off from the rest of the world.

Perhaps we should all read Peter Beagle's Last Unicorn and acquaint ourselves with the fate of the careful, cautious, prudent, self-protective people of Hagsgate. Like them, we may never be able to say what destroyed us; not understanding how we destroy ourselves.

Wise and good guardians we need; gilded gates will not protect us.

Belated thanks

Dear Editor:

I would like to belatedly thank you for your coverage of the Water Management District. I think that it helped to educate people as to what Measure A proposed and provide them with the facts necessary to make an intelligent decision.

We now have a body with the power to make decisions and act. Meeting the present and future water needs of the Peninsula will be a challenge in the years to come. I feel confident that we have an excellent board of directors that brings together people with various types of expertise and experiences.

I look forward to working with the new district to meet the challenge of the future and I hope that you will continue to express interest in its activities.

Kill the bill

Dear Editor:

I am writing on behalf of the 558 Big Sur residents who have signed petitions requesting Representative Leon Panetta to withdraw his bill creating a $350,000 federal study of our area. The boards of directors of the four legitimate local organizations also oppose the bill: Big Sur Grange, Chamber of Commerce and both the Big Sur and the Monterey Coast Property Owners' Associations.

It is unacceptable to have the same agency, the Interior Department, which would fund the study to also administer, supervise and make the final recommendations.

The study is unnecessary because it would duplicate planning work already done or in progress, because our problems are local and are best solved by local means and because Big Sur was "saved" by our 1962 master plan, it became further "protected" by coastal law, and it has been admirably "preserved" by private stewardship—the resident conservators of the land.

We request that Rep. Panetta instruct the Interior Department to withdraw its proposed study to determine the feasibility of a national park designation for Big Sur.

A federal designation of any type would attract a multitude of visitors which would not only disrupt the ecology and damage the environment, it also would destroy the quality of life presently enjoyed by the visitors to and the residents of Big Sur and the Monterey Peninsula.

Big Sur residents and landowners have successfully resisted environmentally detrimental developments from the private, state and federal sectors in the past and we will continue to do so in the future.

'Fat City' gets fatter

by Al Eisner

"CARMEL IS FAT CITY," a former city employee once told me.

As we watch our city fathers go through the annual exercise of budget nitpicking while revenues keep soaring, the statement seems more true now than ever.

At first glance, it would seem that the City Council is adhering to the mandate funds to buy advertising space every two weeks to advertise its agendas. Why, after all these years, does the city feel the need to pay to have its agendas published?

It might be because more and more citizens have been "turned off" by the antics of the council since the last municipal election and have simply quit coming to meetings. The proceedings have taken on the appearance of a kangaroo court. Flogged and treated rudely by certain members of the council, these people have adopted the attitude that "it's hopeless." They're waiting for the next council election.

Carmel has always had an interested citizenry. If honest people of good will find it useless to attend meetings, and the word spreads, the publication of agendas on billboards 10 feet high in downtown Carmel wouldn't bring a bigger turnout.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE of "budget cutting" is a neat example of doublethink. The council trimmed $30,000 from the amount proposed for community and social services. Hooray! At last!

The cuts, however, were illusory. The figure decided upon was actually 10 per cent higher than last year. The imaginary cut was in the bloated figure in the proposed budget.

THE COUNCIL is to meet again tonight to work on the budget. A public hearing is scheduled for Monday, July 17. First and second readings of the ordinances adopting the budget and setting the tax rate are set for Aug. 7 and 14, respectively.

Want to learn a lot about city government? Take along a couple of Nodotz pills and watch the council. You'll get an eyeful. Maybe even a bellyful.

WHILE CITIES and counties everywhere are slashing and trimming, our council dreams up new ways to spend money. Next Monday night, the council will consider budgeting

WELL NOW, looks like all those Business District Haters are just going to have to admit that it's mighty convenient to have it around. Now that we'll all be paying less property tax, maybe we'll see a few "Tourists Welcome" signs painted around town for a change. Might even be sort of nice, and manly for a few Carmelites to go up to a tourist, shake his hand and say "Welcome to Carmel. Thanks for coming."

ONE THING that I found fascinating in the new city budget is the expense listed for the Community and Cultural Department. That is for the intended purchase of a commercial vacuum cleaner for $350. It speaks well for our town. No matter what adversity strikes—drought, flood, lack of revenue—Carmel culture will be clean.

ONE FRIEND OF OURS has a thing about fuchsias. He's got a large collection of many varieties and always is on the lookout for more. He admitted to me that some of them came from his strolls about town. Evening walks amid the dusk and all that. If he happened to see a new color or shape, he would carefully "pinch back" a tiny sprig and tuck it in his pocket to plant when he returned home. I am pleased to report also that nowadays his conscience has finally emerged and he is giving away his own sprouts. So if one morning you find a nice little pot with a new fuchsia in it setting on your gatepost, you'll know it wasn't the Fuchsia Fairy, but a Carmelity returning in kind.

NOW THAT THE Fourth is behind us again, except for the ever lessening bangs of saved-back cherry bombs, I am reminded of one July birthday that took place a few years ago. When asked what kind of cake she would like for her birthday, the reply was "watermelon." Taking the request seriously, the host and hostess for the party puzzled over the question of candles. They finally came up with the answer and when the day arrived and cake time was near, the host made a grand entrance carrying a huge watermelon with a glory of blazing sparklers stuck all over it. It was a spectacular success and everyone remained unsunged and spat seeds for an hour.

Message from Berkeley to the Point

Dear Editor:

With reference to the Carmel Point report printed in the Carmel Pine Cone (June 22), it is my opinion that the UC group has not presented an in-depth study of the situation. It tends, as is often the case with such efforts, to concentrate on preconceived solutions with the reality interpreted to fit said preconception. Landscapers should, I think, for a truly balanced and long-term solution, work in cooperation with state park authorities, sociologists, parents, teachers and even psychologists. A reason for this viewpoint is sketched out in the following.

As a result of having resided in the Carmel Point area, it would appear from my experience there that the UC group, for one thing, seems not to have studied the dusk to dawn situation at all.

It is my understanding that the parking lot for the state beach is closed to vehicles at sundown. This encourages nighttime parking in nearby residential areas where any supervision or containment is even less possible. From sundown until as late as 3 a.m., automobiles congregate adjacent to homes in that beach area, their occupants not intent on surfing or scuba diving. In the morning, the beach is littered with debris and one may awake with nerves shattered by a night filled with ear-piercing screams, horn blowing, shouted obscenities, banging doors, revved-up motors and cars hurtling past at maximum speed.

I agree that creation of one-way traffic and some "dead-ends" would help, at least superficially, with perhaps more patrols during the night.

Of course, youth must spread its wings and resources are limited in the Carmel area. On the other hand, homeowners and the few remaining daytime nature lovers also deserve a break.

The Carmel Pine Cone heading "pull-out section" leapt to my eye and my first thought was that it meant residents of Carmel Point are pulling out, that property values are falling. However mistaken that interpretation may be, I do feel that there is, in the long run, such a threat. With continued or increased unchecked brutalization of the area, nature-sensitive residents will tend to pull out and be replaced by non-caring individuals. Then the suggestions by the students for native planting, discreet fencing and such will be a dead issue.

the 1978-79 fiscal year. Now that figure has ballooned to $890,000.

The Pine Cone contacted six local motel owners last week for reactions to the tax increase. Most indicated it was the short notice of the tax increase—not the 33 per cent increase itself—that angered them.

"When Monterey County raised the rate from 6 to 8 per cent, they at least warned us a month ahead of time," said MacKenzie, who owns the Sandpiper Inn. It is situated outside the city limits. "These silly little increases in taxes irritate tourists beyond all words," he said.

"It couldn't have come at a worse time," said Mike Stanton, part-owner of the 48-unit Normandy Inn. "We book six months in advance. Now we have to tell guests who have already paid that they owe us 2 per cent more," he said.

The sudden tax hike caused embarrassment for Mrs. Lloyd Beilby, co-owner of the seven-unit Spinning Wheel Inn. She was forced to ask guests who checked out Friday afternoon to pay another 2 per cent tax on their tabs. Some other local motel owners said they absorbed the increase themselves for the first few days to avoid the embarrassment.

Clyde Struges, an owner of four Carmel motels, called the increase "a real jab at the tourist industry." He did not question the council's right to boost the taxes, but asked, "I just wonder if they did it right?"

GEORGE BREHMER, who allowed the 3-2 vote, has been denounced by several Carmel motel owners.

"It appears to me the city attorney did not do his homework," said Hank Fonseka, owner of the Jade Tree Inn.

WHEN IT became clear Thursday at the meeting that the ordinance would not receive four votes, Brehmer hurriedly researched the Municipal Code. Only three votes are needed for a tax measure "for usual and current expenses," he said, reading aloud from the code. Groans rose from the innkeepers in the audience.

"It doesn't seem the city attorney should do his research in the middle of a meeting," Fonseka said Monday. Fonseka said he is considering seeking other legal opinions and "would be a party to legal actions," if it is discovered that Brehmer's opinion is incorrect.

Early in the meeting, Councilman Helen Arnold lashed out at Carmel residents saying they were apathetic toward their own budget process. "Why don't they attend these meetings?" she asked.

Before storming out of the council chambers, Fonseka answered her question.

"I was told this tax increase would require a 4-1 vote, but by some legal mumbo jumbo it became 3-2. That, Mrs. Arnold, is why people don't come to these meetings," he said.

cited the more than 1,600 signatures submitted to the commission in March on petitions opposing the hotel.

The commission discussed briefly whether to deny the use permit and cite environmental grounds in addition to the consistency issue or simply find it inconsistent with master plans for the area.

They opted for the latter course since it still will require a planning commission hearing before a use permit can be issued.

Denying the use permit would have put the technical considerations of the project in the hands of the board of supervisors.

Voting to find the project inconsistent were Commissioners Peters, Patchick, Sullivan, Charmaine Cruchett, Walter Basham and Marc Del Piero. Commissioners Manuel Jimenez, Peter Cailotto and Charlie Williams were absent.

Public bus shelters, restrooms studied for downtown Carmel

A combination restroom-bus stop shelter might be installed at the northwest corner of Devendorf Park.

Carmel City Councilman Howard Brunn and City Administrator Jack Collins were assigned to study the idea Monday evening by the City Council.

Another shelter also will be considered on Sixth Avenue east of Mission Street. The two locations are the "hubs of bus operation in Carmel," Collins said. An allocation of $3,000 from Monterey Peninsula Transit (MPT) is available for the shelters, he noted.

"We believe it unlikely that a standard design will be suitable for usage in Carmel," said MPT General Manager Thomas D. Albert in a letter to the council.

A design contest, involving local artists, might be a good idea, Brunn suggested.

Supporting a new restroom facility, Brunn stated, "Anyone in the business community is constantly hounded by people wanting to use their restrooms."

Culture commission wins one, loses one to council

THE CARMEL Cultural and Community Commission, acting on Tuesday of last week, took actions that show it is not in accord with the Carmel City Council.

And the commission won one and lost one Monday, when the council met in a pre-Independence Day session.

The commission unanimously objected to the June 12 council decision to increase the size of the panel from seven to nine members. A letter registering that complaint was forwarded to the council.

The council recanted on that issue.

The commission also requested complete control of the Festival of Firsts playwriting competition—duties never formally assigned, but now shared by the council and Richard Tyler, the director of Sunset

Community and Cultural Center.

Here, the councilmen passed the first reading of an ordinance that gives City Administrator Jack Collins supervisor's power over Tyler.

Two new commissioners were seated Tuesday. They were Robert Wright Campbell, a novelist, and Natalie Murray, a cellist. Reappointed and unanimously selected as chairman was Dr. Lewis Heniford, a professor of drama. This is his second term as chairman in three years.

Absent were former chairman Jean White and Commissioner Elizabeth Szold. Mrs. White was on vacation and Mrs. Szold was in San Francisco. Bernard Van Horne, selected vice-chairman of the commission, attended only the first portion of the meeting and did not vote on all actions.

MRS. WHITE left a written motion that the commission remain at its present size. She had previously stated that a larger commission would only cause larger problems.

The only other city commission with seven members is the Carmel Planning Commission.

Those who favor an enlarged commission, including Councilman Helen Arnold, claim it will involve more citizens in local government and broaden the spectrum of artistic representation on the commission.

Seven commissioners is plenty, Heniford stated Wednesday. The commission has "all it can handle" right now, he said.

THE COMMISSION also asked the City Council to grant it exclusive domain over the Festival of Firsts playwriting contest.

Those duties are formally unassigned right now. Since the contest began one year ago, it has been conducted under the auspices of the City Council and Tyler. But the festival's overseeing body has "never formally been placed," Heniford noted.

The winner of the first annual playwriting competition was David Garonzik, 27, of Washington, D.C. His play, Scenes and Revelations, is scheduled for production here late this summer. He received a $2,000 prize from the city for his play.

The preliminary 1978-79 city budget has allocated $4,375 for next year's competition. Some $3,000 will be awarded in prize money and the remainder will be used to advertise the contest, according to Tyler.

Last year, the city received almost 100 entries and Tyler predicts the city will receive more than 200 entries this year, before the contest ends Aug. 31.

The contest was conceived by Mayor Gunnar Norberg, a long-time advocate of locally produced theater in Carmel.

Council is hard-bitten on doggie crimes

It took the Carmel City Council 40 minutes Monday to postpone action on an ordinance that would make the master of a dog that bites another dog guilty of an infraction.

The law may or may not be applied to cats and billy goats, depending on what the City Council decides at its Aug. 7 meeting. That is the date until which action has been postponed.

The question arose while the council studied an or-inance reducing penalties for less serious crimes from misdemeanors to infractions. Misdemeanors carry maximum fines of $500 and six months in the county jail. A first infraction has a $50 maximum fine.

Allowing a vicious dog to run free should remain a misdemeanor, City Attorney George Brehmer suggested.

This prompted Councilman Helen Arnold to question whether animals that bite other animals should be impounded and their owners liable for fines.

The council conversation continued for a half hour, before Mayor Gunnar Norberg quipped, "Perhaps we could go further and say no person can bite a dog."

South coast fire meeting Saturday

Residents of the Palo Colorado, Garrapata and Bixby Creek area are invited to participate in a community fire meeting Saturday at 10 a.m. in the parking lot at Rocky Point restaurant on Highway 1.

Members of the California Division of Forestry and the local volunteer fire crew will call attention to particular fire hazards in the area, as well as demonstrate basic firefighting techniques. A representative of the Big Sur Fire Department will describe the formation and training of its firefighting force and discuss ways in which the Palo Colorado area might further develop its fire organization.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 78-13

AN ORDINANCE INCREASING THE TRANSIENT LODGING TAX RATE TO RAISE TAXES FOR THE USUAL AND CURRENT EXPENSES OF THE CITY.

1. The current transient occupancy tax of six per cent has not been readjusted since 1975, and

2. The cost of providing municipal services has risen in the last three years, and

3. The City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea finds it necessary to increase this tax in order to provide an adequate level of services necessary for the health, safety and welfare of the citizens.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. That the rate of taxation established by Section 451 of the Municipal Code for the Transient Lodging Tax is hereby established at eight per cent effective 12:01 a.m. on June 30, 1978.

Section 2. That Section 462 of the Municipal Code is amended to read in its entirety as follows:

462. DISPOSITION OF PROCEEDS. All monies collected under and pursuant to the provisions of this Division shall be deposited in the Hostelry Tax Fund of this City and shall be distributed within the fund as follows:

a. So much of the first six per cent as is required to amortize the Sunset Bond Issue each year shall be set aside for that purpose.

b. Of the remainder of the first six per cent, to the extent needed:

(1) That amount necessary to fund the portion of the Municipal Budget covering Cultural Activities, including but not limited to Sunset and the Forest Theater, Parks, Public Facilities and Municipal Structures, and Parking Lots.

(2) The remainder to the Land Acquisition Fund for the acquisition and improvement of parks, recreation land and other lands for municipal purposes, provided that all such acquisition and improvement shall be in accordance with the General Plan of the City, as it is now or may be hereafter constituted. (Ord. No. 267 C.S., 1 July 1972.)

c. The remainder of the first six per cent and the additional two per cent added by Ordinance Number 78-13 to the General Fund for usual and current expenses."

Section 3. Effective Date. This Ordinance relates to taxes for the usual and current expenses of the City and shall take effect immediately after its adoption. It is necessary due to the uncertainty of the City's fiscal condition as of July 1, 1978, and further because of the difficulty in changing existing taxes after July 1, 1978.

Section 4. This Ordinance shall be published once in the Carmel Pine Cone after its adoption.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, this 29th day of June, 1978, by the following roll call vote:

AYES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Arnold, Brown, Norberg
NOES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Brunn, Hughes
ABSENT: COUNCIL MEMBERS: None.

Flood claim denied

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors has rejected an $87,000 claim for damages filed by a Carmel Valley landowner who said county negligence caused two acres of his property to be washed away during the heavy winter rains.

The claim was filed by Scott Ramsden of Orinda, who owns 31 acres of land at Schulte and Carmel Valley Roads, downstream from the Schulte Road Bridge.

Ramsden said the county and flood control district program for removal of dead trees and brush in the Carmel River channel resulted in all the brush—living and dead—being cleared from the riverbank portions of his land in January and February.

"The county and district knew or should have known that removal of all the vegetation from the claimant's riverbank on an outside bend of the Carmel River would result in serious erosion," Ramsden's claim stated.

When the river rose on Feb. 20, the shoreline land eroded because it was "stripped of all vegetation," it said.

Ramsden claimed that the problem would have been alleviated had the county taken steps to protect the land or to notify him of the possibility of erosion.

DENICE FROELICH reads down the checklist of items while David Whitman describes the vital signs the tree is showing. The UC Berkeley students, employed for the summer by the Carmel Public Works Department, plan to repeat this routine until they have counted 12,800 trees. The ride around town is on Whitman's motorcycle. (Michael Stang photo)

Summer job for forestry department

Cal students look up 12,800 local trees

IT MIGHT appear that Denise Froelich and David Whitman are out of their trees, but they're not.

The two youthful forestry technicians from UC Berkeley will spend the next three months checking the growth of almost half of the 32,000 trees in Carmel. They also will be on the lookout for disease.

Chances are, before the summer is over, they'll knock at your door and ask, "May we examine your trees?"

The seventh annual summer survey of trees helps the Carmel Forestry Department determine the condition of its urban forest, according to City Forester Gregory D'Ambrosio.

By checking the condition of both publicly and privately owned trees, the department can determine if more pruning, planting or care is needed, D'Ambrosio stated.

The equipment Whitman and Miss Froelich use is simple: a measuring stick, a notebook (to record data) and their eyes—to scan trees for any apparent diseases.

They measure the diameter of each tree just a few feet up from the base, then check at that same point for bark beetles, tiny winged pests that burrow under bark and steal nutrients from trees.

They record the diameter and physical condition of each tree. Foresters refer to the health of a tree as its "vigor." On a scale of one to four, one means superb condition and four indicates a dying tree. Most Carmel trees are ones, according to Whitman.

THEIR SURVEY primarily covers pine, oak, acacia and cypress trees. They will survey 12,800 trees stretched across 76 city blocks, before the project is completed.

When that project is through, they will begin a second one—probably in September—on the status of trees in Mission Trail Park, at the north end of town. It formerly was called Flinders-Doolittle Park.

The survey will suggest ways to maintain the park and consider future planting there.

In past summers, local high school students were hired to help with the survey, but this year D'Ambrosio said he selected the college students "because of their backgrounds in forestry."

In April, the City Council budgeted $12,500 for a summer student employment program through the forestry division of the Public Works Department. The two tree surveyors will earn about $2,000 each for their work.

MUCH OF their tree research is done on private property. Although most Carmel residents have been amiable, the students have encountered some hostility.

"We tell them we just want to look at their trees, not condemn them," Whitman, 23, explained. But if residents insist that they not trespass, he added, "we tip our hats and say thank you."

One elderly woman, however, invited Miss Froelich, 25, to return for some geranium cuttings. Another resident took the two surveyors on a 20-minute tour of her home.

Both dress casually—usually in blue jeans. City Hall received a telephone call last week from a resident who asked why "two hippies" were being employed by the city.

The two surveyors met here in April, when D'Ambrosio interviewed them for the jobs. They work together eight hours a day, five days each week. So far, they've gotten along. "We haven't hit each other over the head with our measuring sticks yet," joked Miss Froelich.

The two travel around the city on Whitman's motorcycle. Although she escaped injury, Miss Froelich fell off it on her first ride. "He had just waxed the motorcycle, including the seat," she explained.

Sewer service rate doubled to $6 handles the billing for the sanitary district.

The total budget approved by the board on the same 4-0 vote is $392,800 less than the original spending proposal presented in May. It will require a tax rate of 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation, down from 23 cents last year and 25 cents the year before.

The major expenditures in the budget, other than operations and maintenance, are the upcoming Areawide Facilities Plan and a new digester to help treat sewage. Both are required by state mandate and are paid for largely with government grants.

The district also will have a $1.48 million reserve fund for plant expansion and improvements.

Bigelow said if the 15-cent tax does not generate the $179,000 he believes the district will need, the reserves should be used to balance the budget.

The district had to approve the higher user charges on Friday because Prop. 13, which took effect last Saturday, requires all tax or charge increases to be approved by local voters after July 1.

R-4 along Junipero

Buffer zoning passed, may face lawsuit

TWO PROPERTY OWNERS who fear their development rights will be sacrificed to "residential buffer" zoning talked Monday like they would sue the Carmel City Council.

"It would be a shame to take the city to court, but that may be what I'll have to do," said Richard Falge. He owns the Junipero Professional Building on Fourth and Junipero.

His comment came after the Carmel City Council voted Monday to enlarge its new R-4 "residential buffer" zone to include his offices.

Another affected property owner, George Rausch, owner of the Ocean View Lodge at Third and Junipero, added that "whatever legal steps are available" to him would be used to prevent the rezoning. Both said they feared they could not expand on their land once the R-4 designation was applied.

If the council approves the mandatory second reading of a new Carmel rezoning next Monday, it will become law.

THE ZONING DESIGNATION has been on the drawing boards for almost two years. It is primarily residential in nature, but allows for selected commercial uses. If approved Monday, it takes effect on Aug. 10.

Both property owners said the ordinance should go back to the Carmel Planning Commission for study.

The property owners complained that the rezoning would make future site expansion impossible and would work contrary to its purpose as a buffer zone between business and residential areas.

Citing the tough parking, setback and driveway restrictions, Rausch asked the council, "What can I do short of bulldozing to develop my property to keep in conformity with the ordinance?"

Asked Falge, who said he was indiscriminately placed in the R-4 zone, "What is the difference between our property and any other properties (not in the R-4 zone) on Junipero?"

Three properties are exempt from rezoning

"The buffer zone has crept right up the street to our doorstep and is not acceptable anymore," Falge said.

Brian Finegan, an attorney representing three property owners, concurred with Falge. The zone could not be a residential buffer zone, he said, "because there is no residential zone within a rock's throw of the entire west side of the street (Junipero)."

The new zoning is planned for the area between Junipero and Torres inside Third and Fifth Avenues.

J. O. HANDLEY, owner of Carmel Builders Supply, also opposed the R-4 rezoning, Finegan said. The lumberyard has been a central issue in the rezoning debate. The council majority hopes its actions will foster conversion of the site for residential uses such as apartments or condominiums. Councilmen fear a motel or shopping center could be built on the site under present zoning.

"You talk so casually about what you are doing to a person's economic situation," said Claude Kimball, owner of a 4,000-square-foot residential lot. He said he faced an $85,000 property value loss under R-4.

Both City Administrator Jack Collins and City Attorney George Brehmer gave some credence to the property owner's words. The two men agreed that the ordinance was "flawed." They also suggested more planning commission study.

"We cannot go completely backwards and start from a new scratch," responded Mayor Gunnar Norberg.

Councilman Howard Brunn moved for a second reading of the R-4 ordinance, but one which would exclude three property owners from that zone. In its first reading less than a month ago, the rezoning was approved by the council on a 3-2 vote. But this time, the motion died for lack of a second.

COUNCILMAN MIKE BROWN moved for adoption of the original R-4 zone, which did not exclude the three property owners—Kimball, John Molteni and Joseph McEldowney.

Councilman Helen Arnold seconded the motion. Despite inequities he saw in the ordinance, Brunn said he would vote for it. A minute later, when the final vote came, Brunn reversed himself and voted against it along with Councilman David Hughes.

Explained Brunn, "It was obvious the ordinance was going to pass. I just had to get my true feelings on the record. It is not an excellent piece of legislation."

Motel owner's string of misfortune

residential area," Brehmer warned the commissioners.

They were.

The commission interpreted the law to mean any type of commercial expansion. But City Planning Director Robert Griggs said Thursday that the reference in the City Code applies strictly to additional rental units and floor area.

Adding a hot tub or putting green does not come under the code, Griggs stated.

Kim said Thursday that he will seek opinions on the putting green and hot tub from his neighbors, before appealing to the City Council. He said he would offer neighbors free use of the facilities. Kim will scrap the conference room idea, even though the commission approved it.

Kim requested permission to convert a storage area into a conference room. The request was approved unanimously, but with the stipulation that only registered guests could use it.

"Does that mean Mr. Kim and his family couldn't use the room?" asked Griggs. The commission did not respond.

IN A MATTER continued from the week before, the commission denied Kim's hot tub application because it would, in the words of one commissioner, "expand use in a commercial way."

Kim's original plan for a redwood hot tub was rejected by the health department because it might be a hazard to the public. It said a fiber glass unit would be allowed, however. But the planning commission rejected the plan.

"Traditionally, this was just a group of cottages. Now we're getting into conference rooms, putting greens and hot tubs. This is an obvious expansion of commercial use," said Chairman Robert Stephenson.

The cottages have been re-roofed and painted, Davidson said. "It seems to me a hot tub is congruous with a residential area," he added.

THE COMMISSION'S FINAL action was to partially rescind a decision it made the week before on Kim's motel landscape plans.

All seven commissioners admitted they inadvertently approved a 10-hole putting green when Kim's motel landscape approval was granted the week before. The putting green was on the plans, but no commissioners noticed it.

After prompting from the commissioners, Brehmer advised them that the landscape had been approved, but its use had not. He said Kim should apply separately for the use of the putting green. The commission agreed on a 6-1 vote.

"Those are the same plans we saw last week," said Davidson, the lone dissenter. "We're out of order here. This item isn't even on today's agenda."

"The putting green would require setting up equipment and punching holes in the ground. That is an expanded commercial use," Stephenson said, however, and his viewpoint prevailed.

Superstitious? Richard Tyler isn't. But on a flight from Los Angeles to Monterey two weeks ago, the Sunset Center director was acting nervous and apprehensive. Asked why, Tyler replied, "I opened a fortune cookie the day before and it said 'stay out of Birds should be seen and not heard. That's the attitude of one Carmel resident. An anonymous caller has registered several complaints with Pam Mason, the animal control officer, about the birds on Perry Newberry Street. They are making too much noise and chatter, she says, and something should be done about it.

Citing the birds for disturbing the peace is one suggestion.

Sloat Landing ceremonies Saturday in Monterey

Ceremonies to commemorate the 132nd anniversary of the landing of Commodore John Drake Sloat in Monterey are scheduled Saturday, July 8. The two-part ceremony will observe the July 7, 1846, "capture" of California for the United States by Sloat's party of sailors and marines. The public is welcome at no charge.

A memorial wreath will be placed on the Sloat Monument at the Presidio of Monterey at 10 a.m. An hour later, Sloat's proclamation will be read and the American flags of 1846 and 1978 will be raised in the Custom House Plaza, opposite Fisherman's Wharf, Monterey.

The wreath-laying ceremony will be conducted by the Native Daughters of the Golden West, the Native Sons of the Golden West, Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution and the Free and Accepted Masons. The 7th Infantry Division Band from Fort Ord will provide appropriate musical accompaniment and an Army artillery battery will fire a 21-gun salute.

Black rolls 4-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Yes, this is a repeat of last week's diagram. We are just checking to see how well you have learned the lesson on bearing off safely. You may notice that Black's roll is not quite the same as last time.

Again, Black is faced with the same alternatives: Should he use the roll to clear the 6-point by bringing men to the 4- and 2-points, or should he use the 4 to bear off a man from that point and the 2 to advance a man to his 1-point?

There is one great difference between the two positions that result from clearing the men off the 6-point. Last week, that would have resulted in leaving an odd number of men on the 4-point, thereby exposing Black to danger at his next turn.

This time, if Black clears his 6-point he will have four men left on his 4-point. As a result of that, no combination at his next turn can force him to leave a blot—every roll can be played safely. Try it for yourself.

As against that, bearing a man off the 4-point and advancing another to the 1-point again leaves a gap on the 5-point. As was the case last week, Black would have to leave a blot if he were to roll either 6-1 or 5-1, a total of four combinations.

This time your choice is between making a move that is absolutely safe as against one that involves an element of risk while bearing off a man. Since Black is ahead in the race (White must re-enter with his man on the bar and bring it all the way round to his home board before he can continue to bear off), the safe move is the one to make.

Sierra Club hikes to Big Basin, Toro Park

A hike in Big Basin State Park northeast of Santa Cruz and a leisurely Toro Park hike are on the outing calendar of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club. Members of other chapters and other interested persons are welcome to join the excursions.

The Big Basin hike Saturday, July 8, will be a moderate-to-strenuous loop trip to Berry Creek Falls with a 500-foot elevation gain. Bring stout walking shoes or boots, lunch, water and jacket and meet at 7:30 a.m. at Cinema 70 in the Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey. The suggested carpool contribution is $3.

A leisurely late afternoon is planned in Toro Park Sunday, July 9. The four-mile trip will be over some of the lower elevation canyons and ridges of the park.

Meet at Cinema 70 at 2:30 p.m. or in the parking lot at the far end of the park picnic area at 3 p.m. Those who wish may take picnic dinners to eat after the hike. There is a 50-cent entrance fee for each car at the park. For more information, phone leader Roy Anderson, 1-449-0162.

Ventana trails reopened

The United States Forest Service has reopened several trails in the Ventana Wilderness Area for public use this summer. According to Los Padres National Forest Supervisor Al West, most of the trails in the Ventana have been closed since last summer's Marble-Cone fire.

After a damage assessment this spring, the Forest Service has decided to open the following trails: Danish Creek, Skinner Ridge, South Fork Little Sur, Manual Peak, Bear Basin, Pine Ridge, Church Creek, Tassajara Hot Springs and South Fork Santa Lucia. The Chews Ridge Road from Jamesburg to China Camp has also been opened.

Symphony may feel sting of Proposition 13 cutbacks

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

AT ITS ANNUAL meeting last week, an elated Monterey County Symphony Association received the good news from its president, Edward O'Donnell, that not only did it end the year right on budget, it also paid off the $68,000 deficit with which it began the season.

The symphony budget for the coming year is $210,000 and the association membership affirmed its confidence in O'Donnell's leadership by re-electing him as president.

The clearest financial challenge to this record budget is the unknown ultimate effect of Proposition 13. The symphony could lose as much as $20,000, but this appears unlikely. It is known that little, if anything, will be coming from the state-supported California Arts Council (CAC). During the season just ended, CAC provided $7,800 to specifically fund the symphony's in-school demonstration series, which serves the entire county.

Other symphony funding sources that may be in trouble are the Monterey County Office of Education, which supported the in-school program to the tune of $5,000; the county revenue sharing budget and the cities of Monterey, Salinas and Seaside. The city of Carmel probably will match last year's figure of $5,000 and Salinas still has the symphony in its budget proposal.

Combining the California Arts Council's $7,800 with the $5,000 from the Monterey County Office of Education means that the symphony's in-school program alone may lose nearly $13,000 of its $15,000 budget.

ANOTHER LOCAL artistic institution that has felt the sting of Prop. 13 is Hidden Valley, though this has grown out of its relationship to Monterey Peninsula College. Hidden Valley's large summer teaching schedule, tied in with MPC, has suffered a large reduction following the MPC trustees' decision to go ahead with its own summer program, but on a much smaller scale. So, instead of five-week choral and orchestral workshops, these will run only two weeks. The other instructional curricula have been eliminated, but the Julius Baker flute workshop and concert will be given on schedule.

As for the long-range funding that Prop. 13 may affect, Hidden Valley, like the symphony, is keeping its fingers crossed hoping that the board of supervisors' revenue sharing plan will be approved as it now stands. Hidden Valley's CETA contracts are unaffected by Prop. 13.

JUST AS PROP. 13 means a reduction in property tax, it also means that many people will be paying more federal income tax, since the IRS property tax deduction will be smaller. One way to get that IRS deduction back up there is to give a bit more money to a favorite nonprofit organization. Two that immediately come to mind are the Monterey County Symphony and Hidden Valley. But, of course, there is a host of arts groups in our community and I am sure they all would be delighted by your support.

Half-Arabian Horse Show this weekend at Fairgrounds

More than 200 horses from all over California are entered in the 10th annual All Half-Arabian Horse Show Saturday and Sunday, July 8-9, in the Pattee Arena of the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden Rds., Monterey.

A half-Arabian horse is not "half a horse," but a horse sired by a purebred Arabian stallion out of a mare of any other breed. Popular crosses are Arab-Morgan (Morab) and Arab-Thoroughbred (Anglo-Arab). Half-Arabians are also frequently painted and pintos or "spotted horses," eligible for separate registrations and competition in special color classes. Half-Arabian horses are known for their variety, color and versatility under saddle and in harness.

Halter classes begin at 8 a.m. each day, and are followed by shows of the foals of 1977, older foals, young people's classes and championship classes in Western, English and Park Horse equitation. Saturday and Sunday afternoon shows begin at 1:30 p.m. The Saturday evening event begins at 7:30 p.m. and championship classes begin at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The horses will be seen in various classes, including cattle working, park action, costume and side-saddle. In the costume event, rider and horse are bedecked in authentic Arabian trappings.

The Arabian horse is so universally well known that everyone recognizes the ancient breed with its beautiful "dish face," tiny muzzle, high-arched neck and flowing mane and tail. Its bloodlines carefully preserved for centuries by desert sheiks, the Arabian horse was exported on a very limited basis after the Crusades. It made an immediate mark on the horses of the world and is directly responsible for the creation of the English Thoroughbred and, in turn, Thoroughbred horses all over the world.

The show is sponsored by the Arabian Horse Association of Northern California and staged by its affiliate, the Gold Coast Arabian Horse Association.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children and servicemen. Family tickets are $5. Advance tickets are available through the Monterey American Legion Post #41, 375-9015. All proceeds of the show will be donated to charity.

For more information, phone 899-3725.

A Champagne renaissance

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

REIMS—Vintage 1978 is coming on slowly and late, cool, with intermittent sunshine. Unlike the early, frost-hit 1977, the generously laden vines show a promise of a good crop, and everywhere vineyardists are sending up silent prayers for a warm summer and long autumn for the harvest which will probably come a little later than usual.

The wine connoisseur

Here in the Champagne country, where both vintage and nonvintage wines are esteemed, the brilliant sparkling wine is enjoying a consumer renaissance even though the price index is on a rising graph.

The English market for Champagne, long second only to the happy French consumption figures, now totaling some 120 million bottles per annum, is recovering. Italy, despite its sociological problems, pops better than 7,300,000 bottles of this luxurious bubbly. Belgium is next, with 6,784,483 bottles, followed by the United States with a 1977 figure of 4,826,363, a better than 20 per cent increase over 1976. Next comes Germany, which produces a good sparkling wine of its own called sekt, with 3,965,874 bottles; Switzerland with 2,277,961; and Venezuela with 1,641,233.

Russia, which in the days of the czars used to lead all the rest, tags the list with an amusing entry of 36 bottles, though officially there is no importation. The Soviets have their own flourishing sparkling wine fountains with both classical and continuous-line bulk process effervescent wines for the people.

Value-conscious Frenchmen do not question the high prices of Champagnes of grande marque, knowing well that wines begin with grapes, better grapes come from finer vineyards, and in Champagne, those delimited regions of vine-growth, some 30,000 hectares, have been rated on a parity scale of 100. Growers control 90 per cent of the vineyards of the Champagne province; Champagne producers who buy these grapes own only 10 per cent of that total appellation d'origine.

In the recent good years of the '70s—'71, '73, '75 and '76—famous houses such as Taittinger, Laurent-Perrier, Krug, Moët & Chandon, Mumm, Clicquot and so on would pay as much as $1,940 per ton for Chardonnay grapes from high parity vineyards. Wines of lesser repute, of more commercial quality, reach the market at lower prices for (1) being made of cheaper grapes, and (2) spending less time en tirage.

EN TIRAGE tells of the bouquet-affecting years the wine remains in the cellars "on the yeasts" of the secondary fermentation. In California, few Champagne producers can afford the space or inventory costs of more than two years "on the yeasts" before disgorging, final corking and release to market. In France, four years is common, with elite bottlings being as long as 10 to 12 years "on the yeasts" accounting not only for the intensive "Champagne nose" but higher cost factors.

This explains in part the relatively large differences between a wine like Taittinger 1966 Comtes de Champagne Blanc de Blancs Brut, selling in the United States and France, where available, near $45 per bottle, and the Taittinger Non-Vintage Brut La Francaise, basically 1973 wine, at $15. In France, the current French release of the 1966 wine reflects 12 years on the yeasts! Every sip is a regal experience of pure Chardonnay essence mingled with the gifts which come from the chalky soil into which the vine-roots have made 30 to 40 years of penetration.

Taittinger, with its own vineyards surrounding the Chateau de Marquetterie, is one of the few houses which owns significant vineyards to supply consistent quality to its wine, though traditional buying does mark other fine houses in their own regions.

Horse show Sunday in Valley

The Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club will sponsor its annual Summer Horse Show at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club grounds Sunday, July 9. Classes in both English and Western divisions begin at 8 a.m. There is no charge for admission; spectators are welcome.

Trail and halter divisions will be judged by Peter Pedrazzi. These include classes for foals of 1975-1978, Arab, Half-Arab, broodmares and color classes. The latter are for horses of specific colors: pintos, paints, Appaloosas and palominos.

English division classes will be judged by Peter Primiani. Highlights include hunter and jumper classes, pleasure and equitation as well as a $100 Stakes class for jumpers.

Showmanship, bareback equitation, dry stock horse, pleasure, stock seat equitation and a $100 Stakes class are included in the Western division, which will be judged by Curtis Nelson.

High point trophies will be awarded to winners in each age division.

A snack bar will serve hamburgers, hot dogs and other picnic fare during show hours and beverages and cold beer will be on sale.

The Trail and Saddle Club grounds provide restroom facilities and a pleasant tree-shaded picnic and barbecue area as well as playground equipment for the children.

Film society organized

A group of film buffs has formed a nonprofit organization based in Carmel Valley that plans to screen foreign and classic movies.

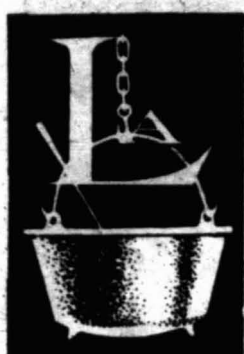

"We have secured the facilities of a very congenial local theater to view the films which we plan to show twice a month," said Dwight Marshall, an orchid grower from Carmel Valley. "But because of the size of the theater, memberships are limited to no more than 150."

He said memberships would be sold for $12 and would offset the cost of film rentals and entitle the member to reduced admission. Marshall said memberships would have to be renewed every six months.

He said the group will be called the Monterey Peninsula Film Society. For additional information, phone 659-4795 or write to P.O. Box 355, Carmel Valley 93924.

Weston is a master of details, timing

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

FOR MORE than 2,000 years, audiences have given their highest regard to those tragedies in which the end was inherent in the beginning. John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men, while not corresponding in every way to the Theater review

Aristotelian formula for tragedy—it is not a Great Man who falls, but a Small—retains that essential element of a doom foreknown, toward which the characters are inexorably impelled by their own natures.

Director Cole Weston returns to the Forest Theater with a production of this famous play notable for both meticulous attention to detail and measured pace. There is no need to rush toward a denouement that everyone anticipates from the first scene on, if not before; what is important in Of Mice and Men are the minutiae, the telling details of mood and character, and of these Weston is clearly a master.

As might be expected with a director who takes his actors to the original setting of the play to rehearse, the time and place are powerfully evoked. The dry heat of the Salinas summer is apparent from the first moments of the play, from the dust on Lennie's and George's clothes to Lennie's eager, slurping drinking from the brackish river.

The characters of the principals are likewise immediately revealed in the first scene. Harold Peiken brings out all the facets of George's personality: his tough instinct for survival, his warring longings for the simple pleasures of other men and for the security of a place of his own, his tenderness for Lennie. His abrupt gestures and rapid-fire speech are those of a man under pressure, except for the rare moments of harmony when he can tell Lennie again and again, in a litany of hope against all odds, of the little farm they will one day buy, the place that will be their own.

Henry Littlefield gives a moving performance as Lennie, portraying him as a true innocent, capable of feeling only love and faith and joy even as his hands kill everything he touches. Littlefield seems to have reached back to the child within himself as he screws up his face in the intense effort to remember or twists his jacket over and over in his huge hands.

Another powerful performance is that of Bill Logan as Candy, funny and likeable at first, then pulling the audience with him into despair as his dream is shattered.

Joeen Sheer is excellent as the "tart," Curley's wife, a skinny Marilyn Monroe who raises the temperature 10 degrees every time she steps onstage. David Saint-Amour gives a thoughtful performance as Slim, while Adam Lembeck is a high-energy Curley. Brad Vaughn is memorable as the odd-gaited Crooks, bitterly protesting the racism that was totally accepted not so very long ago. Harry Rogers gives some depth to the Boss, and Gene Tackett and Jeff Hudelson play Whit and the callous Carlson, respectively.

Lance Jacobson's sets are stunning and effective, from the walls of old barn wood to the small bottles from another era on the wood-crate shelves. The rapidity of the set changes is impressive. The costuming by Carol Hovick also contributes considerably to the sense of setting.

The Forest Theater is one of Carmel's treasures, cherished despite the hard benches (bring cushions!) and occasional cold fog. It's a great pleasure to see it used for a production entirely worthy of it.

Of Mice and Men plays Thursday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita.

A CHINESE serpentine disc, jade archer's ring and jade and gold bracelets (circa 1800) will be shown at the Monterey Peninsula Antiques Show and Sale by Anna Beck Antiques. The 21st annual show is scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 7-9, at St. Mary's-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church, 12th and Central, Pacific Grove. (Patricia Rowedder photo)

SOME OF THE BEST THINGS in town are free!

Sunday at 2 p.m., the Assortment Dance-Theatre Company is making its first appearance at the Forest Theater, but it has been a leader in dance and theater activities in the San Francisco Peninsula area since its inception more than two years ago.

Each of the Assortment's full-scale performances incorporates dance with unique and exciting aspects of technical theater with music which ranges from classical to electronic scores. The company is adept in displaying its technique not only in pure dance pieces, but in humorous and dramatic theater vignettes. A unique and new dimension is added to the Sunday afternoon concerts this Sunday with the performance of this talented and multi-faceted group.

JOHN STEINBECK's Of Mice and Men is the current production of the Forest Theater Guild at the Forest Theater. Performances will continue each Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 p.m. through July 29. This production, directed by Cole Weston, is the first of two plays to be presented this summer. Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part I will be the production that will follow Steinbeck's play. It opens Aug. 3 and runs through the Labor Day weekend. Tickets are $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for students and the military. They are available at the Bartlett Music Store in Carmel and Lily Walker Records in Pacific Grove. You also can purchase your tickets at the box office the night of the performance. There are no reserved seats. For more information, call the box office after 7:30 p.m., 624-1531.

THE SPRINKLING SYSTEM has been installed in the Sunset Theatre and the joyous sounds of rehearsal for the Carmel Bach Festival have begun. The opening performance is Monday, July 17 at 8 p.m. when the music of J. S. Bach and Vivaldi will fill the hall. Good seats are still available for some of the performances and you can reserve your tickets by calling the Bach Festival office in Sunset Center, 624-1521, between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m.

THE MORE TIME I spend in Carmel, the more aware I am of the unique quality and dedication that the community has towards its cultural traditions. The city's purchase of Sunset School gave a focal point to the many groups that perform in the area.

There are five musical organizations, one dance festival, two film series and two theater groups that use the city facilities. These are the permanent performing groups. There are many others that use the Sunset Theatre on a regular basis. At a time when the entire country is realizing a greater commitment to the arts, Carmel has been a leader for over 40 years.

Added to the performing arts is the fact that such an organization as the Friends of Photography maintains its international office and gallery in Sunset Center. The Central Coast Art Association and the Artist's Forum meet regularly at Sunset. The two exhibition areas maintained by the city, the Marjorie Evans Gallery and the Sunset Theatre foyer, give the residents an opportunity not only to see the work of local artists that are on exhibition in the foyer, but also the works of artists from throughout the world shown in the Evans Gallery so the local artist has some idea of what is being done in other parts of the country and world.

It has been found that the arts have an important impact on real estate values and on the esthetic rewards of the area. Carmel realized this many years ago and continues to protect its cultural assets.

Recently, Senator Edward Kennedy (D-Massachusetts) said, "I'd send American artists to countries dominated by oppressive regimes, because they are the ones who best embody our idea of individual freedom and democracy."

We have many such available ambassadors of culture in Carmel.

Deep sea drillers puzzle over 'gaps' in earth's mantle

Crewman from Carmel tells about coincidence with dates in the Bible

By JIM BARRETT

UNEXPLAINED "GAPS" have been found in the undersea layers of sediment

THE SHIP DAVIS works on is equipped with a lateral propulsion system that keeps it above the well it is drilling. Computers are linked to a hydrophone that listens for undersea acoustical beacons and they send pulses to the propulsion units. The motors are mounted on the port and starboard sides as well as in the stern. Also shown here is the flexible drill string. It weighs 200 tons when the "Glomar Challenger" drills through its maximum depth of water—about four miles.

that tell the geologic history of the earth.

Scientists are reluctant to interpret the evidence gathered by the Glomar Challenger, the deep sea drilling vessel that proved the theory of continental drift and has dropped wells 4.5 miles below the ocean surface.

But the ship's assistant engineer, B. E. "Bert" Davis of Carmel, is willing to talk about the finds.

In an interview, he said the "gaps" are found at depths that correspond to dates of cataclysmic events mentioned in mythology and the Bible. The "gaps" actually are unusually thin sediment layers sandwiched between ancient, fossil-flecked soils in the earth's mantle.

"It's like someone took a bulldozer and removed 10,000 years," said Davis, 59. He was home last week completing a course in technical Spanish at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey. He is preparing for another 58-day voyage in the mid-Pacific next week. He works for two months and is off for two months.

Davis is not a scientist, but after eight years of drilling at sea, most of them on the Challenger, he has closely observed the work of the international scientists aboard. They come from 34 nations as part of the 10-year-old Deep Sea Drilling Project. It is sponsored by several universities and six nations, including the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

NOT ONLY ARE "gaps" being found, he RETIRED AFTER 20 years in the U.S. Navy, B. E. "Bert" Davis spent six years as a salesman at Carmel Paint and Wallpaper before going back to sea. He said of the job, "It was the worst goddamn line I ever got in. The people were nice and all, but I'm just not a landlubber." Now, he spends six months of the year aboard the "Glomar Challenger," a U.S.-owned vessel laden with sophisticated equipment used by geologists for scientific and commercial research.

said, but the magnetic polarity from stratum to stratum changes, sometimes dramatically. Geologists believe the north and south poles may flip flop every 100,000 years.

"I know the north pole has moved something like 72 miles in the last 100 or 200 years, but the polarity in some of these rocks is 180 degrees different," said Davis.

As for the "gaps," he said thin layers of chert, a crystalline rock, are being found where geologists would expect to find several feet of sediment.

"Plenty will dispute me," Davis said, "but it looks like melted silica. It looks like somebody took a giant blowtorch to it."

He said the chert strata are found at depths that correspond to geologic upheavals told in ancient stories. "Action described in the Bible and mythology, any of that is valid. We just don't know exactly what happened."

"The time the legends say these things happened—floods, earthquakes, volcanoes erupting—we find the magnetic orientation changes, too. The polarity changes the farther down you go," Davis added.

The Challenger, launched in 1968 for geological expeditions, also is the prow on the international juggernaut to find new oil and natural gas deposits. But the dividend it pays in that quest is only by accident.

"We don't care what we find. We're just looking for information," Davis explained. The research findings are published periodically and given to all nations that are interested.

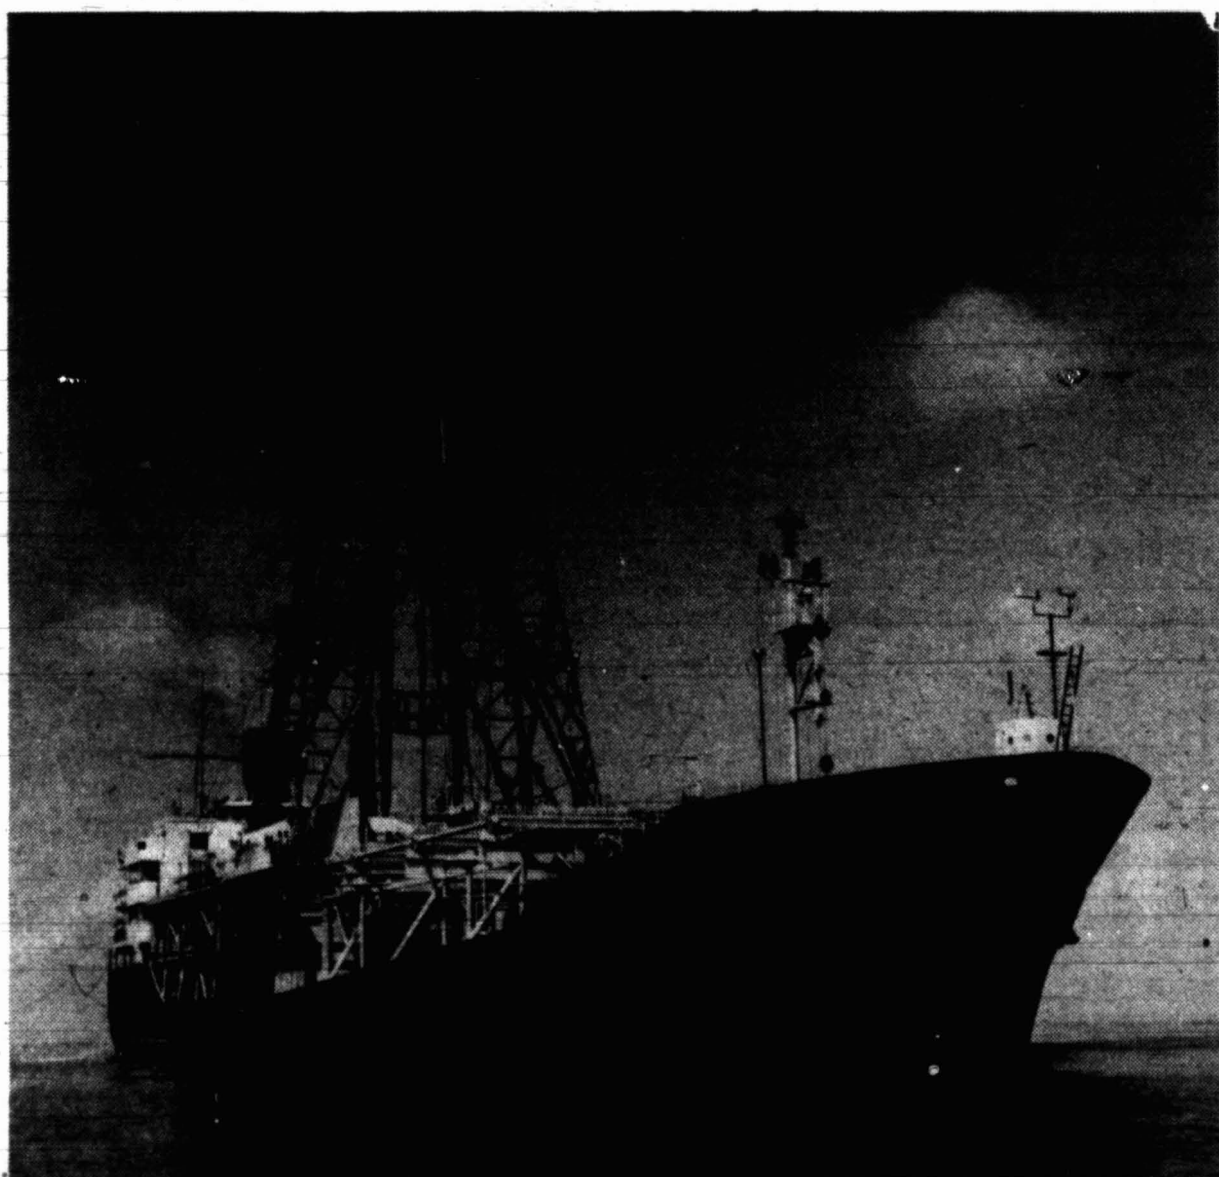

OWNED BY the Los Angeles-based Global Marine Inc., which also owns the Glomar Explorer, the Challenger is a 10,500-ton ship built around an oil rig. It has circled the globe several times, covering 27,000 nautical miles and sinking more than 680 exploratory wells.

Of its many accomplishments, the Challenger is most frequently noted as the ship that proved continents are rooted on moving plates. In 1969, the Challenger dropped wells along a triangular trans-Atlantic route from New Jersey to Dakar, Senegal to Rio de Janeiro to Puerto Rico.

Borings recovered the evidence scientists needed to prove that Africa and South America were on different plates. Where the plates separate, matter from the earth's core oozes up and later settles on the ocean floor. Cores showed that the matter indeed was escaping from the fissure between the plates.

Today, it is known that the two con-

DOMINATED BY its 194-foot drilling tower, the "Glomar Challenger" was built in Orange, Tex., in 1968 and sold for $9 million. It costs about $25,000 a day to pay its crew and keep the ship operating.

According to Bert Davis, the assistant engineer, the technology it uses has been about 10 years ahead of that employed by commercial drillers. "But that is closing fast," he said.

A HUGE METAL cone is dropped overboard and when it noses into the ocean floor, it serves as the drilling platform. It is roughly the size of the capsules NASA used in manned space flights.

He dug Carmel sewer trenches by hand—retires 30 years later

After 30 years of building and tending the sewer system for Carmel, Dario Acevedo retired from the Carmel Sanitary District on Friday.

Acevedo was honored by his co-workers and the district board of directors, receiving a resolution in his honor and some horse tack—which he immediately put to use over the weekend.

Acevedo, 65, is an active horseman, riding in roping events throughout Monterey and Santa Cruz counties. Together with Babe, a 14-year-old mare he broke himself, he still takes away prizes and cash in competitions.

Acevedo came to the Carmel area in 1939 from Arizona, living and working originally as a hand on the San Carlos Ranch high on the southern rim of the Carmel Valley. But the driving distance from the ranch to take his five children to school was too great. In 1947, he joined the sanitary district and moved closer to town, eventually settling in Carmel Valley.

Together with now-district manager Max Drewien, Acevedo was part of the one-two punch that kept the fledgling sanitary district functioning in its early years. He and Drewien would hand dig the 12- to 14-foot-deep trenches for sewer lines and connect-up lines to individual houses.

"That didn't leave much time for maintenance," he said.

Cleaning the lines meant floating 1,000 feet of rope down the pipes, attached to 1,000 feet of cable and then hand cranking it out.

Over the years, the district staff expanded and Acevedo became the chief of the maintenance crew.

He plans to continue his roping. He and his wife, Sarah, moved from the Valley to Prunedale recently, where Babe is pastured on their home lot.

Hearing is Monday on 'large house'

A hearing is scheduled Monday on the coastal building permit application that has stirred debate about "large houses" in Carmel Point.

Applicant Oscar B. Westmont of Beverly Hills wants to build a tri-level home on Inspiration Avenue. Approval was delayed by the Regional Coastal Commission when neighbors presented a petition June 12 opposing the size of the house.

The hearing is scheduled to convene shortly after 9:20 a.m. The commission meets at the Santa Cruz County building, 701 Ocean St., in Santa Cruz.

Three locals added to music board

Mrs. Clifford Tomlinson of Monterey has been elected president of the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula. Her term expires next June. In addition, two persons from Carmel and one from Carmel Valley were added to the board of directors.

Angie C. Machado of Carmel will serve as first vice president; William Surman of Carmel, second vice president; Mrs. Robert Clothier of Carmel, secretary; and Herbert L. Myers of Carmel, treasurer.

Four members of the board of directors stepped down, including Merritt Weber of Carmel, who was succeeded by Mrs. Tomlinson. Others with terms that expired were Dr. Herman Medwin and Dr. Walter Beckh, both of Pebble Beach, and Laura Hubbard Tompkins, who moved away from the area.

New board members are R. E. Barneš and William Surman, both from Carmel; and Mrs. John P. Scroggs of Carmel Valley.

Continuing on the board are Francis Duveneck of Monterey; John Erickson, Richard French, Mrs. James Harkins and Mrs. Orval H. Polk, all from Carmel Valley; Mrs. Bruce Grimes, Mrs. David Hagemeyer, Harry Handler, Dr. Friedy B. Heisler, Mrs. Walter Jennings and John H. Pratt, all from Carmel; Mrs. William Mowatt of Monterey and Marie Oliver of Pacific Grove. The society's first concert of the new season is scheduled on Saturday, Oct. 14 at Sunset Center. It will feature the Hamburg Wuhner String Quartet.

IT WAS ALL IN FUN. Or was it? Outgoing Carmel Rotary Club President Howard Sehlin (left) looks a little shell shocked after his trial for mishandling club funds. Incoming club president Jody Le Towt (right) said he would use clever tactics to cover up his "Rotorgate" activities.

"BUT I want to testify. I've been waiting 32 years for this," stated Ruth Sehlin, wife of the outgoing president. She corroborated testimony given by earlier witnesses that suggested Sehlin skimmed funds for his personal use.

CARMEL POLICE CHIEF Bill Ellis gives his testimony, while "Judge" Tom Brown reads a copy of a girlie magazine and pets his toy kangaroo. Ellis said the police investigation indicated Sehlin had opened 11 different accounts in 11 different banks during his administration. "You all know what I'm thinking," the lawman said. (Jim Hall photos)

Carmel Rotarians 'convict' president

What a way to say 'thank you'

HOWARD SEHLIN, manager of the Carmel branch of Crocker Bank, was unceremoniously but good-naturedly dumped as president of the Carmel Rotary Club at its meeting at La Playa Hotel on Wednesday of last week. It was the final meeting of the 1977-78 year for Sehlin. He will be succeeded by Carmel restaurant owner Jody Le Towt.

A mock trial, complete with attorneys and witnesses for the prosecution and the defense, ended in a guilty verdict by "Judge" Tom Brown. The jurist spent most of his time reading a copy of Playboy and petting his stuffed kangaroo. The latter gave the amused onlookers an early indication of the judge's verdict.

Sergeant Frank Corr of the Carmel Police Department interrupted the luncheon meeting and handcuffed the surprised outgoing president. Prosecuting attorney Dick Wilsdon, a lawyer in Carmel, then delivered his opening statement accusing Sehlin of embezzling Rotary funds for his own use. Sehlin was described as a "despicable man" by Wilsdon, who charged that he had "violated the most sacred trust—the fiduciary relationship of the chief officer and the Rotary Club."

In his opening statement for the defense, attorney Don Freeman said: "The prosecution left out a few things."

A long succession of witnesses "testified" that Sehlin had skimmed funds, siphoned off dues and money collected for fines for his retirement and for his own pleasure.

When the prosecution acknowledged that Sehlin's wife, Ruth, was not obliged to testify against him, she declared: "But I want to testify. I've been waiting 32 years for this."

Rotary District Governor Walter McCloud testified that he checked the records and "found discrepancies between the amount fined and the amount deposited." Carmel banker Bill Schmidt, manager of the Carmel branch of Bank of America, offered expert testimony as club treasurer. He swore that Sehlin had "skimmed" fines. "Why did he do it?" demanded prosecutor Wilsdon. "Because Crocker has no pension plan," deadpanned Schmidt.

Damning testimony was offered by Dan Yurkovich, who noted that Sehlin "was always at lunch, whether you called at 10 in the morning or four in the afternoon."

Carmel Police Chief Bill Ellis said his department's investigation revealed that Sehlin had opened 11 different accounts in 11 different banks. "I cannot render an opinion," said Ellis, "but you all know what I'm thinking."

Jim Rotter, a certified public accountant, testified that Sehlin had traveled frequently between here and Minnesota "and deducted every single trip." The purpose of these trips, Rotter said, was to bring buyers here in August and September to the Cachagua area "to show them lakefront property. Now the dam is filled up and the property is 50 feet under water," said Rotter sadly.

Merv Sutton, owner of Nielsen's Market in Carmel, produced invoices signed by Sehlin for 52 pounds of fresh caviar, at $150 per pound; expensive champagne, snacks and cheeses. "He paid for them with second-party checks," Sutton testified.

Defense attorney Freeman, turning on his own client, hailed the testimony as further evidence that Sehlin had embezzled funds. "He gained 20 pounds this year," said Freeman. "The same 20 pounds Walter (district governor) McCloud lost."

Bewigged "Judge" Tom Brown woke from his reverie to pronounce sentence on the hapless Sehlin: "Death by hanging or eternal damnation as a past president of the Carmel Rotary Club," Sehlin chose the latter.

An appreciative club rose to its feet to acknowledge the fine job Sehlin did for the club during the last year.

"WHAT'S SO FUNNY?" asks Carmel Police Sergeant Frank Corr after handcuffing outgoing Carmel Rotary President Howard Sehlin. Sehlin was playfully accused of embezzling club funds during his administration.

TRAFFIC LAWS TO BE ENACTED

Pedestrians will no longer be open game for Carmel motorists if a traffic ordinance is accepted by the City Council next week.

COMPETITION DEFEATING FOREST THEATERThis year's Shakespeare Festival at the Forest Theater was an artistic success, but an economic calamity for those persons who produced the Taming of the Shrew.

It was not given a fair break by other Carmel theaters, according to one source. If this village had a population of 20,000 instead of 2,000, other theaters would have hurt the production but instead they were deadly.

Is the Forest Theater going to be opposed by other playhouses in future years? If so, then it can't exist.

Foresters see no need for new Carmel tree laws

NEW CITY laws to control the illegal axing of privately owned trees are not needed, the Carmel Forestry Commission unanimously agreed last week.

Last month, the City Council asked for a study of escalating fines for cutting privately owned trees and methods for dedicating them to the city. The study, being completed by City Administrator Jack Collins and City Attorney George Brehmer, will be presented to the City Council on Monday.

"It's the Chicken Little complex," Commissioner Raymond Taylor said of the call for new ordinances. "Every time a tree comes down, they (City Council) come out screaming."

Not enough trees are illegally cut "to start dealing out new laws," Taylor stated.

There are no known instances in recent years of anyone illegally cutting down trees on private property, according to City Forester Gregory D'Ambrosio.

Post Scripts

D'Ambrosio. "The city has never denied a tree removal, then the applicant went ahead and cut it down," he said.

Removing any privately owned tree with a trunk of two-and-one-half inches or more in diameter requires a permit, if the tree is on a private lot or if removal increases the square footage of the property, D'Ambrosio said.

Applications for tree removal are available only through the city building department.

"If there was proof that people are blatantly cutting down trees, then new regulations would be okay. But that is not the case," D'Ambrosio told the commission.

More restrictive tree-cutting ordinances "would get the forestry commission into more difficult situations than it can handle," said Commissioner Sinclair Kerby-Miller.

"It would be climbing in the wrong place," added Chairman Matt Smith.

Escalating fines based on the size of trees illegally axed would be "unenforceable," the commission said in a letter to Collins and Brehmer. "There are already adequate controls," it said. Both the city building inspector and the city forester check all trees on private property before removal is allowed.

Illegally removing a tree is a misdemeanor. The fine ranges up to $500 or six months in jail.

The city should not develop guidelines for accepting ownership of significant trees on private property, the commission also said.

"The city would be subject to liability problems if it accepted ownership of private trees," the letter said.

DAVIS OWNS a "plank" on the Challenger. Crewmen who sail on a ship's maiden voyage, as he did, receive a figurative plank when they retire.

He enjoys explaining political and scientific issues that Challenger missions have provoked. Davis uses a tad of salty language and has the practical insight of a longshoreman.

For example, he talked about the recent discovery of an undersea oil deposit in the Sea of Japan. It stretches from Japan to the mainland of China. The Japanese have a problem, however, because the deposit is deep near their islands and shallow near the China coast.

"Japan, understand, is an energy-starved country," said Davis.

"Now if the Chinese start drilling, salt water could seep into the deep end of the deposit and displace it toward China. That would leave Japan sucking on a dry teat."

The deposit is about 2,000 feet below the sea surface. Presently, commercial drills can only reach down about 1,200 feet, Davis said.

But he is more fascinated by geologic history than political science. Of the Challenger expeditions, he said, "They are widening the imaginations of men who think."

Master plan advisors start marking up Valley land map

By KEN PETERSON

PUTTING PEN TO paper, the Carmel Valley Master Plan Advisory Committee, for the first time, has begun defining specific areas where it wants to see growth in the Valley. It also is recommending specific land uses for some parcels within development zones.

The committee, now 18 months into its work of revising the 1965 master plan, agreed early on that it wants to concentrate growth in the areas around the mouth of the Valley, the Mid-Valley Shopping Center and the Valley Village.

But the 13-member citizens group now is making parcel-by-parcel determinations in some areas to decide whether multi-family housing, commercial development or low-density house development should be permitted.

The committee meets tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Carmel Valley Manor. All of its meetings are open to the public.

The map used by the committee as a basis for the land use recommendations was developed by committee members, Don Middleton, Virginia Drew and Jerri Foote. Middleton and Mrs. Drew are real estate agents; Mrs. Foote is a member of the Monterey County League of Women Voters.

The three originally intended to present a report on the Village area alone, but produced the land use map for the whole Valley for consideration two weeks ago.

The presentation surprised many members of the committee, including Jack Van Zander, a Valley resident employed by Bestor Engineers Inc. He complained that the group was doing what it had ruled out earlier: making specific parcel recommendations. Van Zander chaired the land use subcommittee which would have made such a report.

IN MORE THAN six hours of discussion over the past two weeks, the committee was able to reach some agreements on land use. These include:

- That the 42-acre strip of agricultural land along Val Verde Drive adjacent to the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center be zoned for single-family houses on one-acre lots, with four units per acre permitted if cluster housing is developed.

- That the Mathias property, on the north side of Carmel Valley Road a half mile east of the Village, be rezoned for a resort hotel development.

- That Carmel Valley Ranch be given an additional 18 units for development if it constructs low-cost apartment housing for employees of the proposed 500-unit home, condominium and hotel development.

- That the commercial zoning in the Village be reduced and replaced by multi-family zoning in some areas. Commercial zoning in Mid-Valley would remain unchanged.

The committee agreed unanimously that all minor subdivisions in the Valley must be built up to the standards for major subdivisions. A minor subdivision is four lots or less or lots of 40 acres on larger parcels. The requirement will require developers to submit more detailed plans for subdivisions and to provide more off-site improvements.

"I've been asking for that for 20 years," Van Zander said.

He was less happy with the Val Verde Drive recommendation, saying the area is ideal for high-density multi-family housing. The subcommittee had supported that type of land use.

Mel Steckler, who lives in the lower Valley area, was opposed to high density, however.

"It would be a definite mistake not to preserve the Carmel Valley residential character there," he said.

"It just boggles my mind, Mel," Van Zander said. "Denying it right in the most obvious place where we have a developed commercial area."

Steckler and the rest of the committee—Van Zander dissenting—voted for a one-acre minimum unless the units are clustered, in which case the density would be four to the acre.

THE COMMITTEE accepted general definitions of "development zones" for the Valley while indicating it does not intend to restrict growth to just those zones.

At the mouth of the Valley, the committee wants development concentrated between Highway 1 and the Val Verde area (west of the proposed Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge) and between the shopping center and the High Meadows subdivision to the north and south.

At Mid-Valley, the development zone stretches from the Begonia Gardens on the west to the Carmel Valley Ranch, and from Robinson Canyon to Tierra Grande on the north.

The Village development zone goes from Laureles Grade to an area just east of the Village, and from the Carmel River to the hillsides above the Village.

Chris Keehn emphasized that the development zones should merely be where growth is encouraged, without excluding development outside those zones. Many of the more desirable pieces of development property in the Valley are outside the development zones.

The committee refused to endorse the Odello proposal to build 97 condominiums, a 200-unit motel and an open air market on part of the farmland south of the Carmel River and east of Highway 1. Van Zander said this would assure preservation of 70 acres of farmland.

The panel endorsed a position which would grant no development rights to land which otherwise would have none under the master plan or the county general plan.

Van Zander said this would wipe out the committee's slope density formula, which allows a fraction of a unit per acre on steep slopes. This fraction could be used to concentrate construction on a large parcel, leaving the remainder of the land in open space.

The committee also agreed that there should be more land set aside for multi-family housing at Mid-Valley, but could not agree where.

It rejected a move to rezone the 10.3-acre Carmel Unified School District property on Robinson Canyon Road for multi-family housing. Opponents argued that this would increase traffic along the road.

REZONING PART OF the Berwick property immediately west of the shopping center also was discussed. This faces a potential snag because the dilapidated barn on the property is on the National Register of Historic Places. It is the site of a once-extensive pear packing and shipping business that brought agricultural recognition to Carmel Valley in the 1880s.

No hitches for hospice

A Carmel Valley facility for treatment of terminally ill cancer patients won approval from the project review panel of the Mid-Coast Health Systems Agency last week.

Final authorization for the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula is expected when the agency governing board meets next Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Hollister.

The hospice plan is for a six-patient center at 8900 Carmel Valley Road. Families of the patients would be able to stay at the hospice during the latter stages of their illness.

Executive Director Steve Connor told the project review panel the license for the hospice would be the first of its kind granted in the state.

There was no opposition to the license and it was recommended unanimously by the panel.

Obituaries

Cecil S. King

Cecil S. King of Carmel, a retired teacher and principal with the Navajo Indian Service, died Friday at her home after suffering an apparent heart attack. She was 79.

Mrs. King resided on Monte Verde, south of 12th, in Carmel. She had lived in the Carmel area for the last 20 years.

Mrs. King was a teacher in Nevada and New Mexico with the Navajo Indian Service and a principal in Brigham City, Utah.

Mrs. King's late husband, Granville King, died in 1958.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Helen Marvel of Cathedral City.

In accord with Mrs. King's wishes, there will be no funeral services. Inurnment will be at a later date.

Dorothy Murray

Mrs. Frederick S. (Dorothy) Murray, a resident of Carmel Valley for more than 25 years, died June 28 at the University Branch Convalescent Hospital in Menlo Park following a period of failing health. She was 80.

Born in Los Angeles, Mrs. Murray was a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority at Stanford University, where she met her late husband, Feg Murray, who became an internationally famous syndicated cartoonist.

Mrs. Murray, who made her home most recently at Del Mesa Carmel, is survived by four children: Dr. John F. Murray of Berkeley, Alexander F. Murray of Pasadena, Mrs. Donald Thackery of Woodside and Mrs. James Boswell of Pasadena; also by 11 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Private family services have been conducted in Woodside.

Niel Twilegar

Niel Twilegar, 73, of Monte Verde and Ninth Avenue, died last Thursday at Community Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Boise, Ida., Twilegar had been a resident of the Monterey Peninsula for more than 50 years. He was a retired electrician and worked for several electrical companies in this area. When he first arrived on the Peninsula, he established the El Fumidor Cigar Store in Carmel. He was a member of the electrical workers' union.

He is survived by two sons, Jack Twilegar of Boise and John Twilegar of Monterey; a daughter, Maureen Lostetter of Marina; twin sisters, Ruby and Ruth of Montana; six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Services were given last Saturday at the Farlinger Funeral Home, followed by entombment at San Carlos Cemetery in Monterey.

Anne Patterson posts triple-A swim time

Swimmers from the Carmel Barracudas swept to victory over Hollister, 670 1/2-272 1/2, in the first Coast Valley Aquatic League meet of the summer season.

Highlighting the victory for the defending champions was a triple-A time of 2:28 in the 200-yard individual medley by 12-year-old Anne Patterson. The time qualified her for the Far Western Championships scheduled later this year in Concord.

Anne also had AA times in the 50-yard butterfly and 50-yard freestyle and an A time in the 50-yard backstroke.

Hailey Franke broke a 1973 team record for 8-and-under girls in the 25-yard butterfly. Greg Falge followed suit, setting a new standard in the 9-10 boys 50-yard butterfly, topping the 1968 mark set by Jim Chalkly.

Coach Robert Walthorn has the squad working out in three separate sessions daily at the Carmel and Carmel Valley pools. There are no fees to become a team member, practice or travel to meets. The team is open to all interested Monterey

Five earn high honors at York

Five students from Carmel earned high honors from York School in Monterey for maintaining straight-A grade-point averages during the past school year.

They are Sharon Lee, Rafe Mazzeo, Siobhan Scanlon, Karen Weitzman and Leora Weitzman.

Four students from Carmel Valley and eight from Carmel also maintained averages of B or better.

From the Valley, the students were Laura Bennett, Karen Parker, Tori McCusker and David Sackman.

From Carmel, they were Jennifer Beck, Lillian Dean, Paul Dean, Blake Forrest, Sylvia Laumann, Carol Lloyd, Nina McCusker and Sari Scanlon.

ISABEL ALE OF Carmel takes a call at the Tel-Med tape library of Community Hospital, assisted by volunteer Phil Gray of Carmel Highlands, in the background. The free service provides information over the phone on more than 200 health subjects.

Phone-in health advisory line expanded with 14 new tapes

Community Hospital has added 14 new recordings on health subjects to its Tel-Med Library.

Anyone can call 624-1999 from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily to hear one of 233 health subjects on tape played over the telephone.

There is no charge for the service provided by the hospital auxiliary in conjunction with the medical staff, according to Isabel Ale of Carmel, chairman of the program.

Callers are not asked to identify themselves. The tape recorded health messages run from three to seven minutes. A brochure with the complete listing of the tapes may be obtained by calling the library number.

Mrs. Ale said the new tape recordings and their identifying numbers are: masturbation (174), cancer of the prostate gland (176), cancer's seven warning signals (183), Hodgkin's disease (184), multiple sclerosis (825), menstruation (884), homosexuality (1180), bedwetting (5000), phlebitis (5001), tuberculosis (5502), mental retardation (5003), sunburns (5004), common colds (7019) and poison oak rash (7062).

More than 2,000 persons call Tel-Med each month, according to Mrs. Ale.

Weddings are news ...

Weddings are very special events and we want to tell about them. Here is how to submit your engagement or wedding news:

Obtain a wedding information form at the offices of the Pine Cone and Outlook, Ocean and San Carlos. If you prefer, write us at P.O. Box G-1, Carmel 93921. We will be happy to mail one to you. Photographs of the bride or the bride and groom together are welcomed. There are no restrictions. Both color and black and white photographs will be accepted. We cannot guarantee return of photographs. As a courtesy to the wedding parties, we will not publish a wedding story until after the wedding. For more information, call 624-3881.

ORDINANCE NO. 74
ORDINANCE REPEALING ORDINANCE NO. 71 AND INCREASING SEWER SERVICE CHARGES.
The Board of Directors of the Carmel Sanitary District does ordain as follows:
ARTICLE I—That this Ordinance repeals Ordinance No. 71 passed and adopted on the 12th day of July, 1977.
ARTICLE II—DEFINITION
Section 1—Residential Units—The place of residence for a single family, which shall include units of apartment buildings, condominiums, multiple residential units served by a single water meter, and all buildings having facilities for residential use by a single family.
Section 2—Commercial Units—All buildings other than those defined above as residential units. It shall include, but not be restricted to, hotels, motels, auto courts, trailer courts, restaurants and other business establishments.
ARTICLE III—SEWER SERVICE CHARGES—There is hereby levied and imposed upon the owners or occupants of any premises within the Sanitary District having any sewer connection with the sewage system of the District, or otherwise discharging sewage which ultimately passes through the District sewerage system a sewer service charge as hereinafter provided.
ARTICLE IV—CHARGE FOR RESIDENTIAL UNITS—The service charge for each residential unit shall be SIX DOLLARS ($6.00) per month.
ARTICLE V—CHARGE FOR COMMERCIAL UNITS—The service charge for all property owners except the owners of residential units shall be SIXTY PER CENT of the water usage charge for their property as billed by California-American Water Company, with a minimum service charge of SIX DOLLARS ($6.00) per month.
ARTICLE VI—PUBLICATION—The Secretary of the Board is instructed to have this Ordinance published once in the Carmel Pine Cone, a newspaper of general circulation in the District after its adoption.
ARTICLE VII—EFFECTIVE DATE—This Ordinance relates to taxes for the usual and current expenses of the Carmel Sanitary District and shall take effect immediately after its adoption. It is necessary due to the uncertainty of the District's fiscal condition as of July 1, 1978, because of the difficulty in changing existing taxes after that date and further as a matter of urgency to provide an adequate level of service necessary to preserve the immediate public peace, health and safety of its residents.
ARTICLE VIII—If any section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase of this Ordinance is for any reason held to be unconstitutional, ineffective or in any manner in conflict with the laws of the United States, or of the State of California, such decision shall not affect the

PRIME PEBBLE BEACH

JUST A PUTT from world-famous golf courses ... a very special property close to The Lodge at Pebble Beach ... a charming residence designed by famed architect Clarence Tantau for an artist couple as studio and home. An imposing veranda opens to a gracious tiled entry hall, which in turn leads to an 18-foot-high beamed ceiling living room originally used as a studio. There are five bedrooms, but the flexible floor plan would allow you to use two of them as a suite. Altogether a home of great distinction and prestige. $495,000.

2 BRS., 2 BATHS, GUEST APARTMENT SOUTH OF OCEAN, NEAR BEACH, $169,500

And there's a great deal of authentic Carmel Charm about this home located on Monte Verde between 10th and 11th. Call for more details.

2 BRS., 2 LOTS, NEAR TOWN & BEACH

The home has a den, 3 baths, a separate dining room and it has everything going for it: quality construction, a tranquil neighborhood on an almost no-traffic street, easy walk to town and beach, the charm of an older house that has been remodeled and decorated under the supervision of Beth Danysh, a beautiful natural garden, AND as for value, at $205,000 you're getting it for very little more than land value alone.

FRENCH NORMANDY IN HATTON FIELDS

A new, fully insulated home with a view of the ocean and Carmel Mission. Tastefully decorated with special tiles and wallpapers. 2 decks. Huge lot. 2 bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths, large living room with dining ell. All this for $225,000.

3 BEDROOMS, DEN, 3 BATHS OUTSTANDING VIEW & VALUE

A beautiful, architect-designed home on over an acre in exclusive Rancho Mar Monte. One of the best views in the Carmel area. Large rooms, den with fireplace, breakfast room, large dining area, extensive, easy-care landscaping. One bedroom and bath are quite separate from the other rooms. $298,000.

NEW 2-BR., 2-BATH NEAR TOWN & BEACH

This fine home has beamed ceilings, a dining area, double garage, GE Microwave oven, Jennaire cooktop, a little ocean view and over 1,300 sq. ft. of living area. All this within 4 blocks of both the beach and the Post Office for only $151,000.

1 BR. CO-OP APT.

NEAR CARMEL P.O., $69,500

It may take a while to complete escrow on this, because the owner of the building will do the legal work only after at least one of the four apartments is sold, but where can you get a 600-sq.-ft., 1-bedroom apartment only 2 blocks from Carmel Post Office for only $69,500. Call for details. Exclusive.

EXTRAORDINARY! We have two beautiful homes that are each rare finds in their own individual and different styles. Both are quality homes with bushels of appeal and in a class by themselves. For the discriminating buyer, these are a must to see!

1. A UNIQUE ROCK HOME with panoramic Point Lobos view through six arched windows. Beautiful mellow wood interior, hand-crafted heavy doors and beams, custom made wrought iron hardware from the old "Forge in the Forest" ... and so many other distinctive features. Master bedroom, den, kitchen and living room are on one level. There is a study with corner fireplace on the lower level. In addition, there is an adorable Guest House with fireplace, bath and a "widow's walk" ... and a separate Artist's Studio with bath in its own quiet spot at one end of the property. One must see this property to fully appreciate its value. Please call for an appointment. $335,000.

2. FEATURED IN "HOUSE BEAUTIFUL." Exciting architect-designed contemporary home located in the lovely Peter's Gate area of Monterey. Redwood and Carmel stone exterior, prime redwood used extensively in the interior, skylights, indirect lighting, striking copper and Carmel stone fireplace, and each room opens onto its own private outdoor area. This is a home for adults, with one spacious master bedroom and dressing room/bath PLUS a complete guest suite (with kitchenette) on the lower level. The generous-sized el-shaped living room is charming with its glass walled area open to the deck, its cozy seating area around the fireplace, its intimate reading area banked by bookshelves, and its dining area with garden outlook. Something special at $169,500!

Sunset House on Sunset Lane

Now and then (not often) a house comes along which combines functional design for living with great good taste. This is such a house.

We say that because this house divides at the entrance, with its private sleeping accommodations on the left and its waking hours functions on the right. Directly before you as you enter is its welcome to its guests: the spacious paved entrance hall with recessed chandelier, the formal dining room behind iron railing, and the sunken living room with one wall of stone embracing a raised hearth. Visible beyond is a spacious deck, Monterey pines, and the sea in the distance.

The sleeping area is just that: 3 bedrooms, 2 baths and multiple cabinets and closets off the hall. Walls are white except in the baths, which are attractively papered. The master bedroom is huge, 20 x 14½, and opens to a private deck. The master bath is superbly equipped, with gold fixtures and a bidet.

Most of the dramatics are reserved for the awake-time section at the right. You step first into the combination family room and kitchen, 22½ x 14½, gaily carpeted and brightly papered. It's divided by a butcher-block island (with a second sink!) which serves as preparation and service center. Behind it are walls of select walnut cabinets and a tiled counter with built-in double sinks, double ovens, range, dishwasher and disposal. At the opposite end, sliding doors open to the rear deck.

Beyond all that is the den, 18 x 14½, practically a second living room. Walls are walnut panelled, another rock wall surrounds another fireplace, there's a wet bar, bookshelves, a door to the deck, and a half-bath.

Still more — a large service area with laundry, walnut cabinets, space. All hardware is custom-designed, even to decorative switch and plug plates. Double garage, paved parking plaza, excellent landscaping.

The lot is a bit irregular, about 1/3 acre, and the sunsets are magnificent. Visit this home at 4068 Sunset Lane, near the Hill Gate in Pebble Beach. It's $162,000.

Tulgey Wood-
Unique, Dramatic
Pebble Beach Chalet

This dramatic view of the ocean, Point Lobos and the Santa Lucia Mountains framed by native pines and oaks is just one of the unique aspects of Tulgey Wood, a redwood, shakeroofed, contemporary chalet ideally adapted to a woodsy acre site.

A window wall opening to decks with sunny, southern exposure dramatically reaches from tile floor to 30-foot-high peak of the cathedral ceiling at one end of the two-story, galleried central living core enhanced with handsome paneling accented by brick.

At the opposite end of the central core, a graceful stairway leads to the gallery off which are a theatre, professionally equipped projection booth, master bedroom, dressing area and large, compartmented bathroom. Two more bedroom suites are downstairs.

This intimate conversation alcove is on the lower floor of the open plan central core as are, too, areas for gourmet cooking, dining, games and other desired uses. Wine cellar, sound and alarm systems are among many amenities adding to the enjoyment of the over 4,500-square-foot living space in this unique, dramatic chalet and, in addition, there's a three-car garage.

In a preferred part of Pebble Beach, Tulgey Wood is equally suited to permanent, holiday or corporate use. $650,000.
